1. Gema personnel transferred to Karlshorst from Berlin-Köpenick are slowly establishing offices there, although insufficient space has been provided for laboratories. They are under the Naval Department Research Group, headed by Colonel Korshov. The latter's deputy is Lt. Col. Andreev.
2. Final setting up of this new installation, "within the Soviet reservation in Karlshorst", awaits the return of Colonel Korotkin from Czechoslovakia. Korotkin departed for that country on or about 8 December 1946 to attend a conference. The specific location was not learned.
3. The cover organization, under which German specialists will continue to work on scientific developments for the Russians, has been approved by the Naval Ministry in Moscow and a credit transfer of 500,000 marks has been made to Colonel Korshov's office in Karlshorst.
4. Korshov is reported not to be too keen on the cover organization and to have made several counter proposals prior to the organization's approval by Moscow. He first wanted to transfer the project in its entirety to Russia, then suggested that it be re-established in Berlin's Russian Sector. One of the leading German engineers pointed out that necessary parts, material, and information could be obtained only through a cover organization.
